

Steve Nevey

Relationship Manager, Red Bull Racing

As Relationship Manager, Steve Nevey is responsible for developing and managing relationships with Red Bull Racing's technical sponsors and various engineering and IT suppliers. As Steve puts it, "If somebody knows something that we don't, we want to talk to them!"

Prior to starting this role in January 2003, Steve was Computer Aided Engineering Manager and was responsible for specifying, procuring and maintaining CAE hardware and software for the team, then Jaguar Racing.

Steve joined Red Bull Racing (then Stewart Grand Prix) as IT Manager in 1996, when the team was first established. He has, therefore, seen the team develop from its humble beginnings to become 2010 Formula 1 World Champions; and knows what it takes to get the best out of the best.

In stark contrast to the fast-paced world he now finds himself in, Steve started his career, a long way from the race track, in the shipbuilding industry, as a Ship Designer, where he worked mainly on submarine structures, including the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile submarine, Trident. His initial foray into the challenging world of Formula 1 was with the Footwork Arrows team, where he worked as a Design Engineer for three years, back in the days of Senna, Mansell and Prost, when teams were smaller and the cars were much simpler.

Immediately prior to joining Stewart Grand Prix, Steve taught Design and Design Management to post-graduate degree level at the University of Warwick, where his responsibilities also included consulting with engineering companies throughout the world, notably in India, Thailand, Singapore and Malaysia.

Steve now works with the Team's many sponsors and Innovation Partners to help them showcase their products and services in an environment that, apart from being exciting and glamorous, is very representative of the real world of product design and manufacture. Steve is able to draw some interesting comparisons between the worlds of Formula 1 and more conventional business.
